

Develop Passion

Passion is a wonderful thing to have, but it needs to be directed towards healthy means. People should certainly pursue passions with passion, but it is important to be mindful and respectful of personal and publicly held values.
Joseph Kaluza

---

Passion is the love and rush you get from doing something you love. Passion is what pushes you to do more and more and learn more and more about what you love. On a more emotional level, passion is hand in hand with the love that you may have for special people in your life.
Melanie Coulas

---

DEVELOP PASSION can imply a lot of things. I personally have a passion for a lot of things. I have a passion for the music I create. I have a passion for life and for learning. I have a passion for helping others. I love to give back to the community I live in. I love looking around at the places I live in and noticing their beauty. I love to play and run around. I love to express myself through the arts. I have a passion for reading. I love to debate, but I also love to listen. Having passion simply means having an intense feeling towards something, usually something that you love. Find what makes you happy and what makes you tick. Embrace and practice it. Then you'll have developed a passion for something, and when you have accomplished that, you can truly say that you are living life to its fullest.
Elizabeth Linsley

---

Passion means caring about something with your whole heart and soul. It means that you are easily moved by something. Most people are passionate about something, or many things. Passion is what drives people to do what they do and to believe what they believe. That is why there are so many people trying to do good to the world, because a passion drives them.
Lilly Field

---

Passion is a feeling about something. You are dedicated to that something and you give it your all. When you feel passion, it's like you are soaring, it feels great to know that you put everything you had into something.
Michelle Andoniello

---

Passion is an intense feeling of love. You could go your whole life without one glimpse of true passion. Those who do find it, know it, and there is no turning back. You are changed forever.
David Messer

---

Passion is a love for something such as art, music, a person, etc. which consumes your heart and soul with a wonderful and natural desire. You ache when your passion is not fulfilled, yet sometimes, you can even ache when your desire is being fulfilled.

My passion is my undying love for music. When I hear an orchestra playing a great symphony well by one of the great composers such as Mozart or Beethoven, my heart starts racing and I can feel this overwhelming joy coming over my entire body. It's extremely difficult to explain the feeling, but one thing about passion is:

When you have a passion for something, you know it and strive to experience the same feeling over and over. It's just one of those natural rushes that you wish you could share with everyone around you but you just have to settle experiencing it by yourself, silently hoping you don't burst.

Aileen Kilgore