

ear CADA Family, When I was young I wanted to be a teacher. I got involved in the Anaheim YMCA and attended the summer camp program led by Past CADA President Alden Esping. That is where the world opened for me and I learned about helping others. I became more involved becoming camp leader, staff and eventually Camp Director.

As a student I met several teachers that I now call friend. With the motive of helping foremost in my mind, I met an amazing teacher my junior year, Mrs. Ruth Wilkoff. She was my history teacher and from the first moment in her classroom, I knew how I wanted to spend my life. She made US History come alive. She taught from the prospective of life and not history. She talked about the people long gone as if they were alive today and she helped us connect on a human level with the things that came before us.

I entered college knowing that teaching was my calling but something else was pulling me like a magnet. It was something that everyone on campus ran from, but I was drawn to it. It was Student Activities and once again my teacher and now my friend, Mr. Alden Esping was there to help me make sense of this new passion. I wasn't in student government but I was involved, Mock Trial, Water Polo and Swimming. My passion morphed from teaching History to making it.

That feeling and this journey led me to CADA and it opened more doors for me as a person than I could imagine. My first year I attended a CADA Convention, Stu Shaffer's Fiesta, I was in awe of the people. I ran into a friend I student taught with, Monica Anderson (Area D Coordinator), and it was like coming home. I signed up for everything and went to everything including summer camp. When I arrived for the first time at UC Santa Barbara I knew no one and quite honestly was intimidated.

But I met another President. Peter Cahn who was my roommate. remember that day as if were yesterday. I asked him "So, who are you and what do you do here?" As anybody who knows Peter will tell you, he can weave a tale. And on that day a friendship was born that I cherish. His mentorship has brought me to this point.

That summer I met the most remarkable people and from those camps friendships have grown into lifelong relationships, other than those mentioned before the dearest has been my friendship with now CADA Vice President Cindy Bader. I am who I am today because of mentorship and those friendships. Along the way to running for CADA VP I have been involved in CASL, Area F Council and the CADA State Board in charge of this publication you are reading. I have taken five NASC Trips; I have won the Area Award and the Warren Shull State and Region Awards. I have taken kids to local camps, Washington DC and trips around the globe. I have spoken at Area, State and National Conventions. I have done all this because I opened a door and people made me feel welcome.

Through CADA I have met some amazing people and that is what keeps me going. This is why I chose now to move into the direction of becoming the Vice President. There are many challenges that face us as an organization and I feel I understand not only those challenges but this organization. In the years to come we need to work closely with the state to show the value of what we do. In the months to come we need to have courageous conversations to sustain ourselves in the economy and the educational environment we now face and in the days ahead celebrate each and every successes we have in a manner that everyone in the state can hear.

erving the extended family of CADA is an honor that I have embraced and enjoyed immensely. The opportunity to expand that service as CADA Vice-President is an exciting challenge. Announcing my candidacy for VP reflects my appreciation for the training, support, and inspiration CADA has added to my professional life as an Activity Director and it affords me the opportunity to repay the organization with service to perpetuate its mission and success.

My professional journey began with a major oil company, in which interestingly I was elected as president of the employee's activity association. I then entered the profession that had always been in my heart- education. I wanted to be a factor in the well-rounded development of young people, a fulfilling experience that only we in this profession can truly appreciate. I have taught history, government, and economics as well as coached three sports with experience in middle and high school. a teacher, I always welcomed co-curricular assignments so jumped at the chance to become the Activity Director at Shafter High. This position gave me the forum to put my personal belief into practice. I believe that activity programs provide opportunities for all students, regardless of ability, talent, and social standing, to use their unique gifts for success and a sense of belonging to their school community. I got through the first semester with enthusiasm plus a good support team. Then attended the 1992 CADA convention in San Jose. My life has never been the same! I was exposed to workshops, speakers, mentors and a networking family that gave me the confidence and skills to raise our activity program to new levels. CADA equipped, inspired, and supported me from day one and continues today. I have not missed a convention since I became a member.

As a member of CADA, I have gained experience that I feel will serve me well as Vice-President. I was elected to the area council in 1993, served as Assistant Area Coordinator for five years, and am currently Area C Coordinator. I have been involved in and responsible for the planning and organization of area activities, conventions, and conferences for students and adults as well as participating as a presenter, facilitator, and coordinator. As a member of the State Board I have been involved in strategic planning sessions, audits, and committees for awards and scholarships. These experiences, the continuing influence of CADA, and the relationships formed have prepared me for service as Vice-President.

CADA and education in general face a challenging future. Too often co-curricular programs are early targets for budget reductions. Since we understand the value of positive school culture and climate, it is our mission to communicate the impact and importance of activity programs administration and school boards. A primary goal should be to PROMOTE AND PROTECT ACTIVITY DIRECTORS AND PROGRAMS. We need to:

 Continue and expand certification program developed by the Administrative Task Force. This not only equips Activity Directors, it is a positive factor in professional acceptance and status

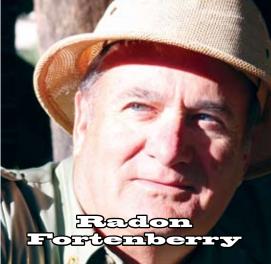

Utilize existing research and develop new instruments to gather data to promote and validate the impact of activity programs.

 Market the value of our members programs using both technology and lobbying of policy and decision makers. Use the forum of the newly adopted Student Leadership Appreciation Week to advance our position.

develop Continue to and expand standards based curriculum and programs.

Encourage regional meetings in each area to more effectively promote networking and support. I am humbled to be in a position to seek your support to spearhead these efforts. I believe my proven skills in communication, teambuilding, organization, and leadership experience will enable me as Vice-President to lead a unified effort to maintain and improve the delivery of outstanding student leadership programs to our most valuable assets – students. I welcome this challenge and appreciate your

JLHS-Area B November 24, 2008

Area B moved the conference to a new location this year – James Logan High School. We have made an effort to separate the high school and middle school students during the conference. That is, we create a high school track and a middle school track geared to the needs of the students. They have different workshops and large group presentations that are more focused on their grade level.

The Area C Safari of 2008 is off to a great start. Our student leadership conference was a resounding success at the world's largest Ag Expo center in Tulare. We served both middle school and high schools separately on the same grounds and had great students, speakers, and we exceeded our attendance predictions. Advisor conference was planned for December to prepare more expert guides and it was an outstanding experience, we are back on track for leadership.

- CADA not only starts with a C, it actually started in Area C.
- Home of the the first two CADA Convention and the first CASL Convention.
- California's highest peak, Mt. Whitney, and lowest area, Death Valley.
- Area C includes the pristine areas of Yosemite and Sequoia National Parks, as well as interesting deserts and agriculturally rich valleys (Ansel Adams loved Area C).
- The first man-powered flight, the Gossamer Condor, took place (Christopher Reeve helped with the dedication).
- The Space Shuttle has landed in Area C at Edwards Air Base on several occasions (sonic booms are cool).
- Privately funded human space flights are available in Area C at the Mojave Air and Spaceport (want to be the man on the moon?)
- Area C is home to the newest branch of the University of California at Merced – the Bobcats.
- Instead of "nuts and bolts", Area C is the leader in the production of almonds and carrots.
- Important factors in the protection of our country and scientific advancement are products of Area C military installations in Lemoore, China Lake, and Merced.
- Area C is proud to be part of the world's finest organization -CADA.

Area D hosts 3 Conferences per year:

1. Our Advisors conference is on the 3rd Monday of September in Avila Beach. This conference was originally held in December, but was moved to September because of scheduling conflicts.

2. The Ventura Middle School conference, which was started by Phalba Thomas in the 1980's, is still going strong and is held at the Ventura County Fairgrounds every November.

3. Area D instituted a High School leader's conference in the southern region of the Area four years ago. This conference was originally held at the Ronald Reagan Presidential Library but was moved to the Ventura County Fairgrounds due to growth.

The Area council is working to reintroduce a student conference in the northern region of the area.

Ventura-Area D November 12/13, 2008

As a motivational speaker I consider myself an educator, but I also know I'm a vendor. I make a living selling my presentations and books to you. Doing business with schools has exposed me to some of the most resourceful teachers in education. Their limited budgets force them to be bold and creative. Some of the richest activity programs are at the poorest schools. Their secret? Stuffraising.

Most activity directors assume they need a lot of money for their programs. This is simply not true. What they need are the products and services money buys. But what if you could circumvent the money and just acquire the products and services directly? You don't need funds. What you need is stuff. The pursuit of this is what I call "stuffraising."

Vendors profit from schools, but money isn't the only thing they want. They have other desires to which you can appeal. Knowledge of these desires will give you negotiation leverage. Over the years I've given many free or discounted presentations for a number of clever clients who understand what education vendors want besides the basic sale. These desires include:

Long Term Business. We want you to continuing buying from us well into the future.

Bulk Purchases. We want you to a buy a lot, and when you do, we may be willing to lower the unit price.

Exposure. We want to get our products and services in front of as many people as possible. Think of the money we spend on our booths at the CADA convention.

Word of Mouth. We want people to talk about us and share the merits of what we offer.

Referrals. We want you to make introductions and send us more business.

Experience. Some of us simply want to practice what we do so we can get better.

Fun. We want memorable experiences and to enjoy life just like you do.

Friendship. We want lasting, meaningful relationships and cool people to be with.

Appreciation. We like being thanked and acknowledged.

To Make a Difference. There's more to life than profit, and many of us want to know we're impacting our community positively.

To Avoid Discomfort. We hate to say "no" when asked directly.

Greenberg

"Stuffraising"

When you know what we're after, you know what else to offer us besides money. You'll be surprised what vendors will agree to if you simply ask and present your request as a winwin. You just have to be a little creative. Here a few ideas to demonstrate the possibilities:

Exclusive Arrangements With Local Businesses. Think of all the local businesses where your students spend money and offer to make them the "Official ______ of ____ School." There can be an official pizza restaurant, tuxedo shop, florist, ice cream store, coffee house, etc. Offer them promotion, and a commitment to a minimum amount of business.

For example, you can ask your pizza vendor to give you 25 free pizzas in exchange for a guarantee of 150 paid orders throughout school year. Then buy all your pizzas from them, and have your student council kids patronize them, bringing in family and friends. Let other campus organizations know you can get them discounted pizza. Perhaps you can pre-sell discounted pizza vouchers at school. You can easily bang out 150 pizza sales in no time. Demonstrate to the pizza vendor how much impact you can make on their business. And don't be shy about reminding them that this business could easily be redirected elsewhere. Remember, they want your patronage, promotion, exposure, etc. Your students are their customers, and you have access and influence. Show your gratitude while also showing your muscles.

Offer Services in Trade. OK, you have little or no money to offer, but you can offer labor. Take the effort you were going to put into fundraising and offer the same labor directly to the people who have the products and services you want. For example, instead of having a car wash to raise money for homecoming fireworks, offer to wash the cars of everyone working for the fireworks company. Or to service their cars in auto shop class. Or to pass out flyers for them. Or to babysit their kids. Or to design their web site. Your students can get some great experience and connect with the community putting out the same effort they currently put into their bake sales, car washes and other small-time fundraisers. Everyone needs help with something.

Sponsorships. Seek help from outside parties who have an interest in what you're doing. Ask your local organizations to financially contribute to your cause. Many will feel good about helping, especially if they know their money will be used for something positive. I can't tell you many motivational school assemblies I've done that have been sponsored by Rotary Clubs, Jostens reps and countless others. You just have to ask.

Partnering with other schools/programs. Multiple schools have more power than one. Approach your vendors as a united front, offering to buy all your helium, butcher paper, or t-shirts from them (or their competitor) at a discount. When schools have offered to find a number of neighboring schools to share me over the course of a few days of speaking, they all receive a discount.

Run your own class reunions. Last summer I attended my 20-year reunion. Our class officers outsourced the event, and no one from the current school administration or student council was there. Why not plan reunions for your alumni? You're already in the event planning business. It will keep you in touch with your graduates, all of whom are potential donors, sponsors and volunteers. On their registration forms there can be a box to check if they'd like to make a donation to your student council. Or even better, a box to check off if they don't. That's in addition to the profit you make from running the event. And remember, every year more than one class has a reunion (10 year, 20 year, etc.). Have your student council create a new position called "Commissioner of Alumni Relations." They can plan these events and get alumni to attend homecoming. Universities have been doing this kind of things for years. For most high schools this is an incredible untapped

A lesson in business.

Share all of the above with your students and have them do it. Make it an assignment. Students can more easily appeal to the heartstrings of adults, and vendors will be more forgiving to a teenager. The more they practice, the easier it gets. Discuss their experience and pull out the lessons.

You can also make a game out of it. Make a list of everything your student council wants. Then give them one day and see who can get the most donated. Imagine what thirty kids hitting the phones can accomplish! They'll have a lot of fun, they'll learn about stuffraising and you'll wind up with more than you could possibly imagine – for free!

A lesson in leadership.

Your leadership students are picking up on your attitude about money and business. If you complain about what's not possible without more money, you're teaching them to buy into your perceived limitations. But if you can instruct them in negotiating, resourcefulness and strategic partnering, you are giving them financial survival skills they'll use for a lifetime.

Convention Improvements ...

... a reminder

This year's annual conference was another milestone in our development. Through the CADA Board's efforts, we were able to attract over 1450 attendees and 700 exhibitors. We explored and successfully implemented new methods of delivering educational programs to our members. Our Sponsors and exhibitors contribution helped make the event an even more enjoyable and memorable experience.

In an effort to continue to improve our Annual convention experience for our members and exhibitors, the CADA Board has had the following policy in place for several years as part of our exhibit agreement that is signed by all exhibitors:

"Exhibitors are not to arrange, plan, or otherwise involve attendees, themselves or their company in any activities on the same day as or in conflict with any scheduled CADA event during the Convention."

Unfortunately, over the years we have witnessed a number of exhibitors ignore this policy. We always address it with the company, but it continues to happen without repercussion to the individual who ignores the policy. This lack of respect has hurt relations between venders and also between some of our members and venders. Our exhibitors pay to attend this convention with the intention of getting exposure to our members during the convention exhibit hours and during other networking events.

Needless to say, the exhibitors become upset and frustrated when we allow a few to ignore the policy for self-serving purposes and pull members away to attend private functions during CADA events. Some of our regular members also feel that they lose the opportunity to network with those members that are taken away from the convention activities.

Our convention is the most important CADA meeting of the year. We invite our members to our party and the CADA Board resents individuals taking our guests away from our events. If a vendor truly wants to entertain our members then they have 360 other days of the year to do so...

We realize that this problem could also be fostered by some of our members asking for the opportunity to be taken out while not realizing the effect on other exhibitors, members and not understanding the bigger picture. Again, there is an entire year to entertain an individual CADA member. Any vender violating this policy will be asked to leave the convention and will be put on probation (Restricted from attending any CADA function) for at least one or more years.

I hope you can understand the CADA Board's position on this matter and support us. This policy will be enforced at future conventions without exception.

Thank you for your understanding and support.

Area E is made up of just Los Angeles County alone, the only Area to boast a single county

- Los Angeles has the largest number of women-owned businesses in the nation.
- The City of Los Angeles is the birthplace of the Internet, Mickey Mouse, Barbie, the DC-3, and the Space Shuttle.
- There are more artists, writers, filmmakers, actors, dancers and musicians living and working in Los Angeles than any other city at any time in the history of civilization.
- There are more than 1,100 annual theatrical productions and 21 openings every week.
- Home of the Los Angeles Dodgers, The Los Angeles Kings, USC and UCLA.
- Hosts (with Area F) a "new" advisor's conference in the fall. This year it was held at the Holiday Inn Select in the City of La Mirada. We had about 60 new advisors in attendance this year.
- One of our most exciting conferences is our STARS (students targeted at reaching success) conference in February. It is for students that are potential leaders but may be leading in the "wrong" way. We have seen many students really inspired over the years and hope that many lives have been changed.

Area E's Student Leadership Conference was held this year at the beautiful Pacific Palms resort in the City of Industry. There were just over 2,000 middle school and high school students attending. In the past it has been held at the Pomona Fairplex and Excelsior High School. We have had as many as 3,000 students in attendance.

What is The California Association of Directors of Activities?

Who We Are:

The California Association of Directors of Activities (CADA) began when a few student council advisors got together to share common problems and solutions. Since that weekend in 1957 CADA has grown into the largest statewide support network for Activity Directors in the nation. The CADA Board of Directors is comprised of four officers, one elected representative from each of the 7 geographical areas in the state, and six directors who direct various programs of the organization. The day to day business of CADA is the responsibility of a management firm under the direction of the Board. The California Association of Student Leaders (CASL) was developed as a CADA board project to provide a forum for student expression. Since 1996, CASL has been governed by a regionally elected student board of 14 directors and assistant directors, and 3 elected officers, under the sponsorship of CADA and guidance from an adult advisory board.

Our Human Rights Policy:

"The California Association of Directors of Activities and the California Association of Student Leaders endorse a policy of complete nondiscrimination honoring and respecting all human differences and encourage our members and their respective schools and businesses to display a genuine tolerance of others."

Adopted by the CADA Board of Directors – 1999

Before coming to the convention, check out the CADA Store on-line at cada1.org.

The CADA store opens up early on Wednesday prior to the start of the convention from 3:00 pm

I suggest you come in and browse at that time before all the sessions start. I also suggest you check out the resources that correspond to the sessions that you are planning to attend. Maybe even buy early!

Our busiest time in the store is right after a session has ended and everyone wants to buy that resource. We run 2 to 3 credit card check out lines and one cash/check line. The receipt process we use is not only to help you but also to check up on our sales. It seems no matter how many check out lines we have, we can still be overwhelmed by the numbers trying to buy. Our CADA Store volunteers work very hard to service your needs.

I would also like to explain my selling philosophy to you at this time. Most of my products are shipped. My goal is to sell out of the items I brought to the convention. Most items can be reordered. Convention specific items become garage sale items at the next convention. The less I have to ship back to the warehouse the best it is for the organization.

Over 90% of the items I carry at the convention can be purchased on-line 24/7. Any backorders can be filled within 14 days.

I am trying to listen to your woes about the store and make some changes that will be a win win for everyone. I am working on having keynote speakers items in the store, larger sizes, and a computer that can take your orders on-line at the time of the convention.

Anyone wanting more information regarding the CADA Store may contact me, Linda Westfall @ Lsurfwestfall@aol.com.

Welcome to the Amazon Rainforest of South America

Did ya know?

Area G is made up of two counties: San Diego and Imperial

- Boasts the most CADA Presidents.
- The State Convention is held in Area G every other year.
- We have more CASL board members in AREA G than any other area.
- Three of the 18 CADA Board members are from Area G.
- Our San Diego slogan is, "America's Finest City"...
- AREA G slogan is "Leaders for Life".

A History Lesson from Dr. Anglea Aschbrenner

We posed the quesion "What does Area G do that has been unique in CADA" to Past President, Dr. Angela Aschbrenner and a wealth of history kept coming, here is a synopsis of her story.

We started with Area "G" workshops for advisors in the 60's and I had the first one with Bob Burton at Torrey Pines Golf Club, and several of those who attended became CADA State Presidents, Larry Laird, Alden Esping (This was his introduction to CADA) Gloria Jones (who, in the Grossmount District introduced the ASB Nomination Convention which copies our National Republican & Democratic Conventions so our students could learn by taking part in how the process worked including how to caucus, this model was then copied throughout the nation). In later years people like Stu Shaffer, John Deavers, and Denise Van Doorn picked up the helm. As you can see, Area "G" has had several CADA State presidents. We started student workshops in the early "70s" at Roosevelt Middle school then Torrey Pines High, with Mark Sharenbroich and Earl Reum as our speakers. As we grew, we went to hotels like the Town & Country but then they got so large that we came to the Del Mar Fair Grounds.

When Bob Mangus was president, we started five "Spirit Camps" one at San Diego State and saved schools a lot of money plus we taught Leadership. I was the first state coordinator. Back then, since our dues were only $ 25 per year, our state board meetings were held in our homes and I remember sleeping bags and making all kinds of sandwiches to stay within our budget. We all bought our own t-shirts and paid for our own transportation. You can see, things have changed. There is so much to tell. We owe a lot to our founders and those who paved the way for us to enjoy the outstanding organization we have today!

Del Mar - Area G November 15, 2008

ilver Level Q

Question: What is your memorable CADA most experience?

By far, being awarded CADÁ's Honorary Life Member in 2005. I was shocked and truly honored. There are so many great people involved in the organization that have done so much for CADA and I am grateful for the acknowledgment. The award has a very special place in my office next to our sponsorship plaques.

Question: What is the most common question do activities directors ask you when deciding on a portable sound system?

Activities Directors at High Schools want to know if the system is capable of handling a crowded gym for a Rally. Gyms are difficult acoustical environments and we designed the Mega Max sound system to handle it. The big horns and drivers and the 2600 watt amplifier does the job better than almost any installation at a fraction of the cost, and comes complete with DJ features that the students really love. Activities Directors also want to know if its easy enough for the students to set up and use. YES! All of our portable sound systems are ready to set up and use, just plug and play! Question: What sound system do you typically recommend to middle

Our best selling sound system is the Audio Max, due to the fact that it does not require any speaker stand set up and covers audience sizes up to 1500 or so students inside or outside. I love how easy it is to transport and the cabinets have storage to hold mics, stands, and cables.

Question: What makes you sound systems so unique?

schools?

All of our sound systems are pre-wired, color-coded and loaded with features. A big red button turns the systems on, the wheels we use glide easily across campus and lock so it doesn't roll away on an incline, the doors lock with clearance for the cables so you can set up the system, walk away until you are ready to use it. The roll out rack on the Mega Max and Audio Max allows you to run the sound away from the back of the system, on the other products the speakers latch on top of the system so they roll in one piece.

Question: How do you handle service on your products?

I want our customers to be happy, and to keep coming back and tell their friends about our quality and service. We offer a complete Three Year Warranty and on-site service regardless of your location. Most of the time we can solve any issue over the phone in about 60 seconds. All you have to do is call us and we will take care of you. Really, just give us a call! Due to the quality of the products, the brands we use are workhorses. Agustin is like the Maytag guy, but we do keep him busy since we have over thousands of customers around the country and the world.

Question: What is your favorite part of your job?

As the president, I wear a lot of hats! I love going to schools and doing demos for the students and staff, especially on a nice sunny California day playing music for lunch. Its a blast! I am always amazed at how savvy the students are, and how quickly they master the sound systems and the features. My next favorite is delivering the loaner sound systems to the CADA and CASL camps each year.

Question: What do you like most about CADA?

The people, and of course the CADA convention! When 1500 plus fabulous Type A personalities get together under one roof, great things are bound to happen! If you have never been to CADA, sign up now and you will find yourself going year after year. See you in San Diego!

CADA Area

Welcome to the Rainforests of Central America

Area H was developed out of need. CADA was beginning to branch outside it's natural borders and the United States began to take notice. States like Arizona and Nevada were coming to the Convention and after the word got out other states followed. With our relationship with National getting stronger, Hawaii, Minnesota, Virginia, Illinois were others that sent attendees annually and of recent years we have gone International with our friends from Canada joining the mix.

CADA's goal has always been to promote and support leadership development and student activities, and if we can take our mission outside of ourselves then we are doing our job well.

We thank our members outside of the state, although you are not voting members as you are outside of the state of California, we value your input, your assistance and your friendship.

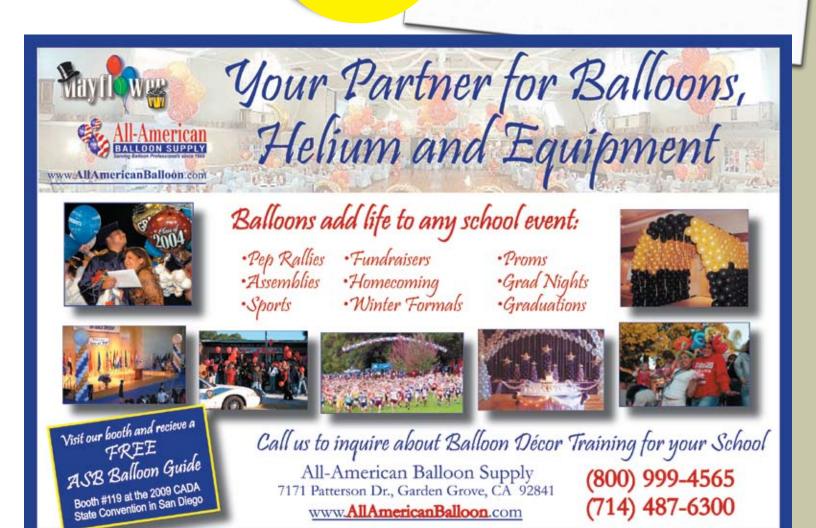

Aloha,
