August 2015

Welcome BACK!

Time for retreats, planning and “Back to School”

The end of summer brings mixed emotions to our students, parents and us. The rigors of education today consume professional development time and “Common Core” infiltrates lesson plans and teaching methods. As educators involved with student activities/leadership we have a head start preparing students to become “21st Century Learners.” CADA is striving to have lessons and presentations geared to common core so districts will see the value of the workshops and conferences that are offered.

Each year brings a new set of challenges and skill levels to a program and/or class. CADA/CASL and Area B hope that by attending our Advisor Workshop you will leave with concrete ideas to bring back to your site. Jeff Culver who is CADA's newly hired Professional Development Coordinator will be coming to introduce himself and present. Advisors who attend this workshop will receive a discount coupon to attend the student conference. Only those in attendance will receive the coupon this year.

Bring your middle or high school students to the November conference to hear amazing speakers, be exposed to great ideas in workshops, dance a bit with SOS during lunch and get charged to finish out the semester. MS and HS students have different schedules. This conference has sold out the past two years so please register early.

Registration forms for the advisor workshop and the student conference are available on the CADA website. www.cada1.org. Contact me with any questions or concerns that pop up during the year.

Happy Back to School to Everyone! Lorraine
