A photograph showing four students from behind, looking at a wall covered with numerous hand-drawn self-portraits. The portraits are simple line drawings of human figures, each filled with various words, phrases, and symbols representing their inner thoughts and feelings. The students are wearing backpacks, suggesting they are in a school setting. The portraits are arranged in rows, and the students are standing in front of them, observing the artwork.

IN 2013 THE AIM PROJECT WAS BORN.

A global art initiative in which over 6,000 individuals are participating as anonymous self portraits of inner dialogues that have finally found a safe space from which to speak.
